

Eric Kroeger, President

Overview:

Eric started his career in banking in NW Indiana in 1986. After recognizing a need in the market, he formed a consulting company designed to help community banks implement personal computer networks across their organizations. The firm was acquired by a financial services company, and Eric became their Information Technology Director.

After four years helping to manage the organization's information technology and security group, Eric helped form a new company that blended information security experience with virtual technology. The new company, Virtual Innovation, uses technology solutions combined with innovative strategies to solve security, availability, and recovery challenges for its clients. In addition to his numerous relationships within the financial services community, Eric is a regular contributor to industry groups on bank technology and security.
